

AUTISM INFINITY

The challenge that we have addressed is Disability in High Schools.

We have created our app, Autism Infinity to assist schools in creating a calm environment for autistic children and their peers to be effectively educated in. Our app works by the collaboration of the autistic child's parents and an autism specialist to enter into the app every problem the autistic child might have and how to help them overcome it. The teacher/s of the autistic child can then use the app every time they may need help, controlling the situation quickly so that the autistic child and their peers can continue learning.

Our team came up with Autism Infinity by asking ourselves the question: How can communication between parents of an autistic child and their teacher be better? We then brainstormed ideas, choosing the one we thought was the best, which was our app.

The benefits of Autism infinity is that it provides better parent teacher communication and can prevent a great number of autistic children from being over-stimulated at school. This creates a much better learning environment for both the autistic child and their peers

Through creating our app, we have learned how much of a struggle school can be for autistic children.

Participants: Chloe Hay and Keira Soeterboek

School: Elderslie High School